FOR A WHOLE RED FEATHER—Captains in the Community Chest drive which starts Monday at five local Cone Plants are shown with a large chart like smaller ones on plant bulletin boards. Each chart illustrates the goal for the Chest donations in the local plants: 100 per cent. As the various percentages are gained in employee contributions, that area will be colored red. When the goal of 100 per cent is reached, all bulletin board feathers as well as this large one will be entirely red. Pointing to the goal is Proximity Plant Captain, Glenn McDonald. Other captains, left to right, are, Luther Smith, Revolution Rayon Plant; Carl Pegram, White Oak Plant; Leo Redmond, Print Works Plant, and Will Marshburn, Revolution Flannel Plant. The drive closes at Cone Mills on October 31.

"Our two major events are Industry-Education Day and the Ministers' Tour," said Carlson. "This year, we will hold two meetings on the same day, in order to bring this outstanding speaker to the groups."

The sixth annual Industry-Education Day banquet will be held at the Plantation Supper-Club that evening at 6:30 o'clock. Dr. Nyaradi's theme will be "It's Your Business." ## Cone Cotton Exhibit At N. C. State Fair

At the request of Mr. Frank Teuton, U. S. Department of Agriculture official, Cone Mills has placed a special educational exhibit in the new State Fair Glass Arena in Raleigh.

The colorful display, one of many featuring the "end uses of cotton," presents the latest Cone fabrics and their adaptation to a variety of garments. Interesting, hand-painted denim plaques outline the step-by-step processing of raw cotton into finished fabric.

Chester Arnold, Cone Mills personnel director, has indicated that the display may become a permanent traveling exhibit and be presented at various functions throughout the Cone organization.

Cone Recreation Center Opens Mon.

The Cone Recreation Center, located in the building formerly occupied by the White Oak Branch of Cone Memorial YMCA, will be open to the public on Monday, October 24. Carl Pirkle, director of special activities of the Greensboro Recreation Department, has announced that tentative hours of operation will be from 2:30 p.m. until 10 p.m.

Mr. Pirkle states that the city plans to blend its program with the former one there but will offer a varied program which will reach more people in the long run.

Some of the city-wide activities to be held at the center are Greensboro Aquatic Club, The Gate City Photographic Society, the adult instruction program in swimming and ballroom dancing and meetings of the Quadrille Club. The Greensboro Junior League has been using the center for rehearsals of its Follies program to be held at the Senior High School next week.

Nominal fees will be charged for swimming, towel rental, bowling and billiards.

Textile Ministers Hear About Coliseum Plans

W. H. Sullivan, chairman of the Greensboro War Memorial Coliseum Commission, spoke to the Textile Ministerial Association at their monthly luncheon last Wednesday. Officers of the local ministers' group were also elected.

Rev. F. L. Braddock, pastor of the Church of God, will be president; Rev. Daniel Lowe of Stevens Memorial Baptist Church, vice president; Rev. W. L. Bennett, pastor of the 16th Street Baptist Church, secretary.

The group announced that the annual Christmas dinner, when wives of the members will be guests, will be on December 14.

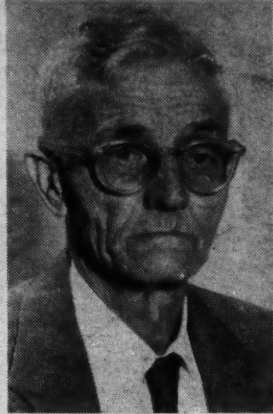

Mr. Sullivan, who has served as Greensboro's mayor for two terms, traced the history of the Coliseum plans in the city from 1941 until the present. He stressed the fact that a group of responsible citizens decided that Greensboro should do something to memorialize the men who gave their lives and to honor those who served in World War II. He reminded them that to date not a brick has been laid.

Mr. Sullivan showed the ministers detailed blue prints of the proposed auditorium and recreation center to be built on either side of a memorial park which the city's garden clubs have offered to plan.

Cone Mills Included In Greensboro History To Be Published Next Mon.

Cone Mills Corporation shares a goodly part of the much-awaited history, Greensboro North Carolina the County Seat of Guilford, by Ethel Stephens Arnett, written under the direction of Dr. Walter Clinton Jackson. The book, sponsored by the Greensboro Chamber of Commerce and published by the University of North Carolina Press, will be available next Monday, October 24.

The author is the widow of the late Dr. Alex M. Arnett, who served for many years as professor of North Carolina history at Woman's College. Mrs. Arnett herself has taught classes in this state's history at the college.

Dr. Jackson, who was consultant for the project, is former chancellor and professor of history at Woman's College.

This book is one of the most comprehensive and detailed works to appear in a long while. According to Mrs. Arnett more than 10,000 hours were spent in its preparation.

No fact has been included unless verified many times by several responsible sources, proof of Mrs. Arnett's justified claim to the title historian.

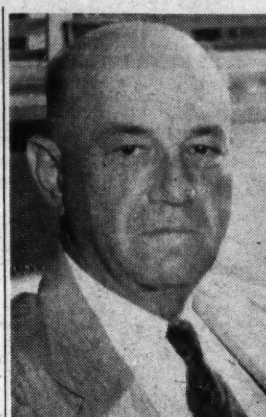

Dr. Jackson states in the foreword, "While this is a history of Greensboro, covering every phase of its life—social, religious, educational, economic and cultural—it has been constantly kept in mind that people are more important than facts or events or dates—that people are the makers of events and movements. After all, then, this is a history of people—people who live and loved and wrought and planned and dreamed. These people built a fine city. Its citizens have greatly achieved. The Colony of North Carolina was sparsely settled. This place had no great advantages such as rivers and harbors and mountains. But the people had a good heritage of character and courage and energy and imagination. While only a small number of its citizens have achieved fame—at least some of them have gained world-wide fame—they have given to the state and to the nation some of its greatest leaders. And they have built a city of no mean proportions.

"The story of these people is interesting and is told as nearly as truth is known and recorded, for the benefit of those who come after."

This history of Greensboro deals topically with many phases of life here such as transportation, schools, churches, manufacturing, etc.

Anyone who has lived in Greensboro for any length of time will want to read and own a copy of this result of vast research and interesting writing. The book contains 200 illustrations. The vast appendix contains much chronological data of interest.

European And American School Comparisons

An article appearing in the October 21 issue of U. S. NEWS AND WORLD REPORT highlights a problem which has concerned millions of American parents as well as educators.

The question is frequently being raised at this time as to whether or not our educational systems in the United States are to the best interests of the child of today and the citizen of tomorrow.

The criticisms are being made by thousands other than those who would have us go back to the sole teaching of the three R's. Many enlightened and progressive citizens are seriously concerned over the failure of the child to learn many of the fundamentals of education in the public schools.

One very severe criticism is that there are too many extra-curricular activities and too little actual teaching and studying.

The article referred to above compares schools in this country with schools in Europe. According to the article, which is a combined report of London, Paris, Bonn and Rome, the students in European schools "learn more, work harder, play less than in U. S. schools."

From comparative studies and knowledge, it is very evident that the European child is much further advanced than the American child. In face, it is very evident that grammar school children in Europe are taught and have knowledge of high school subjects.

No doubt the European child is not as well rounded as the American child and probably misses many of life's finer qualities because of the type of training he or she receives in school.

On the other hand, it is entirely possible that if the American is disqualifying himself for the future age in science and knowledge it will be because of inadequate training in school.

It would be extremely difficult to arrive at a definite conclusion as to whether or not the European schools and methods are better than ours, or vice versa. However, we do know that a thorough study should be made of the entire educational situation, and we have little doubt but that much could be gained from a study of the systems in Europe. We feel quite certain also that the European schools could better adapt their pupils to life by observing some of our practices.

It is of utmost importance that our school systems and methods be impartially evaluated for the best interests of the pupil of today and citizen and our nation of tomorrow.

New Parkway Link Opens Vistas Of Autumn Color

A new section of the famous Blue Ridge Parkway is being opened just in time for the big autumn foliage show which is approaching its peak in North Carolina's Blue Ridge and Great Smoky Mountains. It is an 11-mile stretch of smooth, paved highway from Wagon Road Gap, on U. S. 276 south of Asheville, to Beech Gap, in the high, wild and handsome Devil's Courthouse country to the southwest. Tentative opening date is October 21.

The Parkway's newest link is situated at an average of 4,500 feet, and reaches 5,000 feet at one point. From lofty overlooks there are magnificent views of Mount Pisgah, Looking Glass Mountain, and the forbidding crags of the Devil's Courthouse. The Parkway entrance at Wagon Gap may be reached via U. S. 276 from Brevard or Waynesville, and both approaches lead through Pisgah National Forest.

Autumn color is expected to be at its best in this section and along the Blue Ridge Parkway north of Asheville during the third week in October. Color is increasing in the Great Smokies and Nantahala National Forest, where color is usually later and lasts into November.

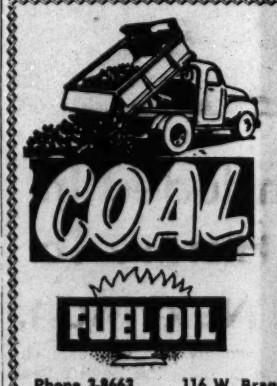

At mid-October, there was a brilliant display of yellow, mingled with the red of dogwoods, sourwoods and gums, along the Parkway from the Virginia line to Craggy Gardens near Asheville. Maples were beginning to turn, but oaks were still green and their deep bronze and rich crimson tones completing the color scale usually appear during the last part of October.

Frost at altitudes above 3,000 feet accelerated the color parade the weekend of October 9, but in the cooves and valleys of the Great Smokies and in the foothills of the Blue Ridge, green still predominated during the second week in October.

Mountain ash, particularly at Blowing Rock, Mount Mitchell, Craggy Gardens and Clingman's Dome, is more abundant and more brilliantly colored than in many years. At Craggy, the orange-red berries of mountain ash are almost as plentiful now as purple rhododendron is each June. Ash is also plentiful on Grandfather and Roan mountains.

Visitors who want to see and photograph to begin their sightseeing early in the morning, or drive to high overlooks in the late afternoon, when the slanting rays of the sun wash the mountain slopes with gold and heighten the effect of the autumn color.

 Closed during this year's color season is the Parkway spur between U. S. 19 and Heintoooga Overlook; it is being resurfaced before cold weather sets in and will be ready for travel by early spring.

Heal For All

Rx: Love

"Love, to be taken regularly in large doses." Those were the words on the prescription blank the doctor handed to Jimmy's mother. Jimmy had been suffering from frequent stomach upsets.

Children have stomach disorders caused by emotional upsets, just as adults do. Many of these illnesses, doctors believe, begin because the children do not get enough love and are surrounded by an atmosphere of irritability, impatience and anger.

Many cases of infantile colic are also thought to be largely emotional in origin. Colic frequently develops in babies whose mothers are cross and impatient. A baby's greatest need is for the sense of security that affectionate mothering gives him. When a baby becomes "colicky," he may be expressing his feeling of insecurity. More affectionate and patient mothering is often the best remedy.

In older children, "bottled up" emotions may also show themselves in real physical illnesses. Perhaps the child may complain only of "knots in my stomach" or "cramps." But peptic ulcer and ulcerative colitis are not uncommon. Children who develop these conditions may be very well-behaved youngsters who are unable to express their angry feelings. Their troubles are often traced to the fact that their need for security and love was not met in infancy.

Jimmy's trouble started the spring he became a pitcher for the Tigers, his Little League team. He was a good pitcher. But he began to be afraid to play for fear of losing. He felt that his parents were proud of him and loved him only when he won. So the stomach upsets arrived with every game.

The doctor was able to recognize the emotional basis of Jimmy's trouble. He was able to show the parents that their good little boy who was so eager to please was not a happy child. They learned to be more patient with his boyish failures, and to show him that their love did not depend on his behavior. Jimmy's stomach trouble was cured by love.

The Bible Speaks
To Your NeedBy Rev. W. L. Bennett, Pastor
Sixteenth St. Baptist Church

Are you discouraged? Do you feel life is not worth living? If so, you need to "cheer up" and listen to Jesus. Jesus often ran across persons in the pit of despair, and to them He would say, Be of Good Cheer." We find three notable "good cheers" spoken by Jesus in the Gospels:

1. The "good cheer" of pardon. "And, behold, they brought to Him a man sick of the palsy, lying on a bed; and Jesus seeing their faith said unto the sick of the palsy: Son, BE OF GOOD CHEER; thy sins be forgiven thee." (Mt. 9:1-2). This is the first "good cheer" Jesus can speak to any heart. You will note it is the "good cheer" that comes to a forgiven heart and a clean conscience. We must first come to Jesus, confessing and forsaking our sins, before we can receive the joy and peace which come with pardon. Many want the blessings

Jesus gives, but not badly enough to give up their sins. But to all who repent and believe, Jesus says, "Be of good cheer. Take courage. Your sins are forgiven, your past blotted out. I regard you as if you had never sinned. You are justified in God's sight, and the peace of God is your unspeakable gift. To know our sins are forgiven is the greatest factor in cheering the human heart."

2. The "good cheer" of His personal presence. "And immediately He talked with them and said unto them, BE OF GOOD CHEER; it is I, be not afraid." (Mk. 6:50). Jesus spoke this "good cheer" to His disciples in the face of death. He speaks comfort and safety to His followers today as they face the manifold distresses of life. To know that Jesus is in our midst always brings courage, comfort and faith to our fainting hearts. Indeed, His presence enables us to face the impossible. The Psalmist said He absolutely feared no evil, not even death. Why? For "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." (Ps. 46:1). Jesus is never so near to the believing heart as in the midnight hours of life.

3. The "good cheer" of His overcoming power. "In the world ye shall have tribulation; but BE OF GOOD CHEER; I have overcome the world." (Jn. 16:33). Do the saints of God have trouble as do the unsaved? Yes, God's children are not spared the ordinary or extraordinary distresses of life. Jesus definitely promised trouble to all who would follow Him. Nevertheless, he says, "Be of good cheer. I won every battle over every enemy. I overcome all things. And you, too, can overcome the world if you, like I, will let God rule and reign in your lives."

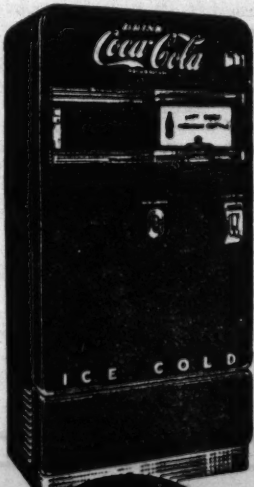

You say you are discouraged, defeated and cast down? Then be sure you are trusting Jesus as your Savior. With this question settled, then claim victory in His Name over every problem in life. "I can do all things," Paul said, and then gave the secret in saying "THROUGH CHRIST which strengtheneth me." (Phil. 4:13). "We are more than conquerors THROUGH HIM who loved us." (Rom. 8:37).

United States Textile Mills Facing Crisis

WASHINGTON.—Reports from United States and Japanese government sources on the influx of foreign textiles into America bear out statements of industry spokesmen that mills of this country are facing their "worst crisis."

The Japanese government has disclosed that August fabric sales by the industry of that country to U. S. buyers totaled 52 million yards—a one month figure greater than the entire amount of cloth imported from Japan during all of last year, which was 47.8 million yards according to the U. S. Census Bureau.

A. K. Winget of Albemarle, president of the American Cotton Manufacturers Institute, says the American people—particularly textile employees, cotton farmers and those who work in the apparel industry—are "only beginning to realize how seriously they can be affected by a 'two-pronged Japanese invasion.'"

He describes the two "prongs" as (1) rapidly mounting fabric shipments and (2) an even more spectacular rise in imports of ready-made apparel, which with other types of goods are pouring into the country in amounts far above what the industry feared earlier this year.

Compared with last year's total of 47.8 million yards, 1955 imports of cotton cloth from Japan had already reached 44 million yards by the end of July, Census Bureau figures indicate. By contrast, total imports from Japan in 1952 amounted to only 15 million yards.

The flood of cotton wearing apparel shipments is shown by latest Census Bureau figures on the Japanese wholesale value of goods that are officially recorded as brought into the United States. Totals have climbed steadily from $32,605 in 1952; $437,322 in 1953; $877,525 in 1954; to $9,122,326 for the first seven months of this year.

Continuing at the present rate, cotton ready-made apparel shipments can easily top $9 million in value by the end of the year, industry statisticians assert.

"I firmly believe the U. S. Textile industry is facing its worst crisis," Mr. Winget said. "The data now in our possession prove that previous estimates on what might come in 1955 are ridiculously low and all signs point now to an even worse year in 1956 unless corrective steps are taken."

Although the Congress voted that the textile industry should not be made to suffer further heavy loss of tariff protection in future legislation, the State Department forced through tariff slashes at Geneva last spring under a former law.

Soon after news was received from Geneva that the new cuts would be effective September 10, orders placed in Japan by American buyers of cloth and apparel began to shatter records. Japanese fabric sales to U. S. importers hit a new high of 36 million yards in July and now the Japanese Ministry of International Trade and Industry reports August sales of 52 million yards.

Owing to the time needed to turn out the goods and transport them across the sea, it may be several weeks or months before the crest of the August sales hits this country, in the opinion of the ACMI president. In fact, a bulk of the deliveries may not reach here until early 1956.

This appraisal of the situation was also borne out by a decline in actual cloth yardage imports by the Census Bureau for July, amounting to 3.9 million. Industry observers predict the official tally on actual August receipts will likewise be low, as cloth buyers would delay shipments to take advantage of the lower tariff rates after September 10.

Census Bureau tallies on August imports will not be available for several weeks, but the decline already noted in July was described by Mr. Winget as "probably an ominous calm before the storm."

The "only salvation" for American mills and the network of businesses linked with the domestic industry will be the setting up of a quota system or "cut-off" point to regulate the importations of foreign-made goods, Mr. Winget said.

Polio Foundation Pres. Speaks Here

Polio will not be wiped out until everybody susceptible to the disease has been given the Salk vaccine, Basil O'Connor declared last Tuesday.

O'Connor, president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis addressed 200 volunteer workers from the Carolinas and East Tennessee meeting here at the King Cotton Hotel to draft plans for the 1956 March of Dimes campaign.

"The Salk Polio vaccine marks a magnificent victory over a virus," O'Connor told the group. "But the disease caused by this deadly virus is not licked yet. It won't be until crippling polio is a thing of the past. That can happen only when everybody who is susceptible has been given the protection the vaccine affords, and when we've rebuilt the lives of tens of thousands for whom the vaccine has come too late."

A highlight of Tuesday's meeting was the presentation of a special citation to Mr. O'Connor by Chancellor Robert B. House of the University of North Carolina. The special citation to Mr. O'Connor by "superb service to humanity," was presented at a luncheon at the King Cotton.

William T. Polk And The Textorian

On October 5 of last year, William T. Polk, associate editor of the Greensboro Daily News and author of the bestseller, Southern Accent left a very busy desk where he was preparing editorials for four days in advance so that he could attend the annual Editorial Writers' Conference, and came to Proximity YMCA to pay tribute to The Textorian. The occasion was National Newspaper Week, and the surprise luncheon program honoring the Cone Mills newspaper was attended by more than 40 representatives of the various clubs, churches, schools and other groups served by this paper. The program had been arranged by Cone Memorial YMCA.

Bill Polk, author, critic and editor, died this week. Yet his loyal friendship, keen wit and great wisdom will keep him alive among us for many years to come.

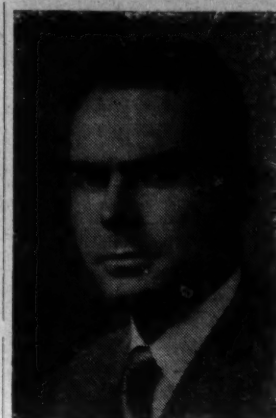

We shall ever be grateful for the tribute he paid this paper that day. In his usual joking manner, he began his talk by saying that he had not seen his way clear all of that busy morning to take the time to attend the luncheon and make the talk, but said he, "I just thought, if we newspaper people don't honor one another, who else will? So I rushed on out here."

When Soviet Russia presented Hungary with a crippling war damage claim for $200,000,000, Dr. Nyaradi was sent by his government to negotiate with the Russians. He spent seven months in the Red capital, reduced the claim to less than a fourth of the original amount, and in the process came to know some of Communism's top men. Afterwards, Russian pressure forced Dr. Nyaradi and his wife to leave Hungary. He is now chairman of the department of economics at Bradley University in Peoria, Ill.

The exhibition has been arranged by the Elliott Hall Fine Arts Committee. Exhibitions hours will be from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily. There will be no admission charge.

It has been regarded as one of the most outstanding examples of contemporary art in America. The collection of Matisse painting and sculpture alone has made it world famous.

The Cone sisters while living in Europe developed friendships with such artists as the young Picasso and Matisse. Beginning in the early 1900s the sisters gradually acquired one of the world's most important single collections.

When Miss Etta died in 1949 she bequeathed the collection to the Baltimore Museum, along with $400,000 for a special wing. Some of the items were given to Woman's College.
